Magee named Director of Standards, Learning and Accountability at WDE

CHEYENNE -- The Wyoming Department of Education announced today the selection of Julie Magee as their new Division Director of Standards, Learning & Accountability.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Cindy Hill said, “We had a number of great candidates vying for this position, however, in the end Julie was the best fit for the job.”

Magee is an experienced English teacher. She has been the Assessment Division’s lead for language arts, responsible for reviewing and making decisions about the content of Wyoming’s state assessment for language arts.

Julie’s background includes grant writing, grant management, and serving as the English department chair for a school district in Las Vegas, Nevada. Hill said she is confident that Magee’s ingenuity, energy, diversified educational background, and student-centric vision dovetails nicely with the goals of her administration.

Magee states she has a passion for knowledge and enjoys working with others. The fact that she is enrolled at the University of Wyoming earning her doctorate in educational leadership exemplifies her passion for knowledge. Those that work with her attest to her ability to work with others to achieve positive results.
