Dear Educational Professional,

American Traffic Safety Services Association represents men and women nationwide who work in roadway work zones. It's a dangerous business. Each year, approximately 720 people are killed in work zones – most of which were motorists and occupants in vehicles.

To reduce these numbers, we are bringing this issue to the attention of the motoring public, as well as to school children. Perhaps if children learn at a young age the dangers that are involved in roadwork projects, these numbers will hopefully come down in the years to come.

As part of this effort, American Traffic Safety Services Foundation has developed a poster contest that invites children, grades kindergarten through sixth grade to submit their impressions of the daily life of America's roadway workers. Work zones are everywhere, and I'm sure children are familiar with orange cones, barrels, and men and women doing their jobs on roads every day.

All of the rules and requirements for this contest are contained in the enclosed packet. First through third place prizes will be awarded and the winners will receive cash prizes of $300, $100, & $50 respectively, with a matching cash prize being awarded to the school.

We are advertising this program nationwide and we want to ensure that children are given an opportunity to participate in a worthy cause. Please visit our website at www.atssa.com and click on "The Foundation" tab to download additional copies of the enclosed materials.

Sincerely,

Melanie McKee
Foundation Director

Grades K-6

Sponsored by the American Traffic Safety Services Foundation

Students in grades kindergarten through six are invited to submit their impressions of the daily life of America’s roadway workers for a national poster contest. With roadway work zones expected to increase in the coming years due to safety improvements and overall renovation of the U.S. system of roads and bridges, motorists and their passengers are more likely than ever to encounter some of the nation’s most overlooked heroes: the men and women who build and rebuild roads to keep America moving.

Like any worker, roadway workers get up in the morning, plan their day, say goodbye to family and loved ones, and head out to the workplace. Try to imagine, however, that in this case, the workplace may be smack in the middle of a super-highway. From the worker’s perspective, every signal, sign, cone, barrel or other temporary device is a lifesaving innovation. Every driver and passenger is a vital partner in the lifesaving equation.

Each year, approximately 720 people lose their lives in work zone accidents -- most of them drivers. Students are encouraged to take time to recognize the reasons work is undertaken, the type of jobs performed by roadway workers, and the families, loved ones, community responsibilities and other roles performed by these men and women, who have some of the most dangerous jobs in America.

Posters should reflect the view from the road -- what a roadway worker sees or thinks about as he or she performs daily duties. Posters may also reflect key actions drivers and passengers can take to protect lives in work zones:

- o Slow down to posted speeds.
- o Merge as soon as signs instruct.
- o Unplug from distractions such as cell phones and unnecessary conversations.
- o Turn light on in work zones and display an orange ribbon to show workers you support their safety.

Submissions will be judged by a panel of roadway industry experts in an age-appropriate fashion. Contestants will be judged in three categories: grades K-1, grades 2-4, and grades 5-6. National Level winners will receive cash prizes – 1st place wins $300 in each category, 2nd place wins $100 in each category and 3rd place wins $50 in each category with a matching prize awarded to each of those schools.

Posters should be created on paper, cardboard, or foam board no larger than 8 1/2" x 11". All submissions should be drawn horizontally. Each student's name, grade, school, school address/phone number and name of supervising teacher must be firmly affixed to the back of each submission. The attached release form signed by a parent or guardian must also be included with each submission.

The winners of the contest will be notified in writing by May 31, 2011.

Classroom Discussion Tips

Facts:

- Work zones are important – they are needed to upgrade and maintain our roadways. These upgrades make our roads safer and they ease congestion.
- Drivers can expect roughly one work zone for every 50 miles traveled.
- Approximately 720 people die each year as a result of accidents in roadway work zones. The majority of those deaths involve drivers.
- Slowing to posted speed limits and focusing on what is ahead inside the orange barrels can immediately prevent accidents.

Exercises:

- Students may observe roadway work zones for a period of time, then discuss with the class the various types of roadway workers they recognized (i.e., flaggers, heavy equipment operators, laborers, etc.). Students can also draw the “safety signs” they observed and discuss what each sign means.
- Students can set up a roadway work zone in the classroom or on the playground. Students might observe various cones, barrels, signs, barriers and other devices used to maintain safety in work zones, and then create their own replicas of these items. Alternatively, local highway departments may be pleased to provide authentic work zone safety devices for demonstration to students. Once the work zone is assembled, students might play the roles of roadway worker, driver and passenger to demonstrate wise and unwise behavior in a work zone. Students may wish to navigate the work zone on bicycles, skateboards, in-line skates, or by other means.
- Older students may take the enclosed “Why a Work Zone?” quiz, which examines why work zones exist and the types of critical work performed in various types of work zones.

“Why a Work Zone?” Quiz

Work zones play a vital role in keeping America moving. They may be needed for a variety of reasons, including:

- the maintenance and construction of America’s roadways, regarded as among the best in the world;
- safety improvements to existing roadways, to save lives and reduce injuries among drivers and to reduce wear and tear on vehicles; and maintenance and installation of utility services that run along roadways, including electricity, natural gas, and telephone service.

Assignment:

Locate and report to the class on at least one example of the three roadway work zones described above.

Location of work zone: _____

Purpose of work zone: _____

How did you determine the purpose of the work zone?

How many workers were required for the job you observed? _____

Can you identify the roles of the various workers you observed?

What sorts of signs and devices were used to manage traffic around the work zone?

How did drivers behave in the work zone? Did they respond to the signs and follow posted speed limits?

Imagine yourself or someone you love as a roadway worker. Are you satisfied with the level of protection from the surrounding traffic demonstrated in the work zone you observed? Do you feel that drivers demonstrated concern for worker safety or respect for the work being done? Explain.
