Larry McGarvin enjoyed the work session yesterday especially the assessment aspect. Something needs to be done and he appreciated what everyone had to say. A lot of the things were new and he learned a lot.

Dana Mann-Tavegia spent a week in Fort Jackson, South Carolina, working with the Army on fighting the incidence of dropout and increasing scholastic aptitude among high school graduates. They discussed how important quality public education is to the future of the United States and how the skills required to graduate from high school prepare for post-secondary education and the 21st century work place are the same as what the Army looks for in the modern soldier. She was very impressed with methods they are using in tackling this problem. They have good resources schools can use free of charge. NASBE received additional grant funds to cover airfare and lodging so issues can continue to move forward. For additional information visit the NASBE website.

Joe Reichardt has been requested by NASBE to work with Governmental Affairs. He would appreciate any input. Joe Reichardt, Phil Orton, and Mike Hejtmanek are on the subcommittee for the media drop out campaign; they would appreciate any comments or input. He also has a connection with Terry Jones and will recruit him to help.

Bill Anthony stated he spoke with Alan Moore and Bernie Schnorenberg at the National Standards Conference in Cheyenne about the national standards in Math. Waiting for the language arts piece which will be followed by actual grade level outcomes to address them. We should consider adopting these so districts can use them as a guide or develop their own district outcomes.

Dana stated how important it is to delineate the differences between national standards and common standards.

Superintendent McBride commented that we have to be careful; the math standards exceed our current standards. He likes the idea of common core standards. Every state will be raising the bar with graduation standards as the end result. We need to be on the Board to have a voice in this process.

No Child Left Behind - They are currently accepting input and should have a finalized version around Christmas. This needs to be a continuing agenda items as we start this process. Concerns were expressed about having a voice in this process; Superintendent McBride assured the group we would have a voice.
