PRESS Release

Local Teacher of the Year, Tyler Bartlett, Receives Accolades

Weston County School District #1 teacher, Tyler Bartlett, received the district Teacher of the Year award for 2015, according to Superintendent of Public Instruction Cindy Hill. Bartlett, a teacher for 5 years, serves as math teacher at Newcastle Middle School.

“I believe teaching is the noblest of all professions,” says Bartlett. “There is no greater responsibility than teachers to their students. I can’t think of better way than spending a day working with my students, building relationships with young people and inspiring a passion for learning. There is nothing quite as satisfying as watching students become successful young people capable of achieving their dreams.”

Speaking about the teaching profession, Bartlett comments, “While new standards, assessments and accountability measures may be introduced, one thing remains the same today as it was a century ago: the key to student learning is student engagement. I feel a personal responsibility to my students and their learning that is stronger than any legislative measure.”

Bartlett will receive a crystal apple award from the Wyoming Department of Education.
