

The 21st CCLC Connection

STARLIGHT FEATURE

Well-rounded Education with 21CCLC School District Partners

21CCLC programs, with strong school partnerships, demonstrate the power of well-rounded education by bringing the community together.

Big Horn CSD #1&2 is a shining example. Alumni Brittany Rivera, now a UW student, found a community need for kids to learn a useful skill. This led to "sewing monsters," a club where elementary students learn to sew. Coordinator Jodi Croft reports two community members volunteered as "sewing experts," and a staff member donated supplies for the Halloween-themed creations. Crook CSD #1 also has an afterschool sewing club.

21CCLC programs also strengthen family and community bonds. Families at Sublette CSD #9 programs enjoyed an ornament decorating night, with one parent commenting, "This is why we love our small town. Big towns don't bring you together like this."

Excitement is spreading! In Sheridan CSD #1, a parent in Shelby Filer's ski club at Henry A. Coffeen Elementary was so thrilled their son finally spoke to his mom about something other than video games.

A well-rounded 21CCLC education goes beyond academics, including life skills, community engagement, and personal growth. It features hands-on learning, like the sewing club, and fosters social bonds by uniting students, families, experts, and alumni for shared activities. Ultimately, it offers enriching opportunities for holistic growth, preparing children for life both in and out of the classroom.
